IRIS

All things considered, the Iris is one of the finest garden flowers we have. It gives us the best return on our investment of any flower that grows. It thrives and blooms under all kinds of adverse conditions. It embraces all the colors of the rainbow, gives a wealth of blooms, and may be planted in the garden along the walks, on embankments or any place that is not too shady or too wet.

LIST OF VARIETIES

The American Iris Societies rating for quality are expressed by the figures before the names. 100 is perfection. I list none below 83 points. The plants without figures are the fine newer kinds that are not yet rated. "S" denotes the upper petals. "F" the lower.

DAFFODILS

DAFFODILS are the true harbingers of Spring, lifting their golden fragrant flowers soon after the snows have passed. They bring promise that winter is over, and that Summer is on the way. They light the garden with a glow of color, so welcome at this time of the year. When you consider, that when once you plant Daffodils, you will have them always, as they will bloom year after year, without care or protection. They will grow anywhere, in the sun or shade, in the garden, or in the fields, or among the shrubbery, or any place they can be left undisturbed. Surely you could not make a better investment than a few dollars in Daffodils.

ORIENTAL POPPIES

---

Oriental Poppies are gorgeous and barbaric flowers, and should be more widely planted. The flowers are very large, many over six inches, and range in color from nearly pure white to dark maroon, they are perfectly hardy, need but little care, and rarely suffer from disease, or pests. The plants become dormant in Summer, and die to the ground, so their location should be marked to avoid injuring the crown. This is the best time to plant them, as they are sure to make a good Fall growth, and bloom the following Spring, if not hurt or disturbed. They will make a large clump and last many years. They also may be planted in the Spring with good results.
